Click Here

Hajdi cela lektira pdf

Hajdi lektira za 4 razred.

After the death of her parents, five-year-old Hajdi was brought to live with her grandfather in the mountains. The following passage is about her first day in a new environment. Here, we meet Hajdi's grandfather and eleven-year-old boy, Peter, the goat shepherd, whom she will spend most time with on the mountain. ON THE MOUNTAIN (extract) Early morning, a sharp whistle woke Hajdi up, and when she opened her eyes, she saw how golden light was shining through the round window and blue blankets and hay next to her, and everything around her sparkled like gold. Hajdi gazed around in wonder and simply didn't know where she was. But then she heard a deep voice outside, and suddenly everything fell into place: where she came from, why she was on the mountain with her grandfather, not anymore with old Ursula, who was almost deaf and always cold, due to which Hajdi had to sit near the fireplace in the kitchen or near the stove in the room, and Hajdi had to be close to her all the time. Therefore, it often felt boring inside and she wanted to escape outside. She was thrilled when she woke up in a new place and remembered what she saw yesterday and what she will see again today, especially Belka and Mrkuša. Hajdi jumped out of bed quickly and put on everything she had worn the day before because she didn't have much to wear. Then she went down the stairs and came out in front of the cabin. There was already Peter, the goat shepherd, standing with his flock of goats, and her grandfather had brought Belka and Mrkuša out of the stable to join their group. Hajdi ran up to them and greeted them all good morning. "Do you want to go with the goats too?" she asked her grandfather. Hajdi was very excited, so she jumped up with joy. !!! Ona je istrljala lice, vrat i ruke grubim ubrusom, kao što ga joj je deda ostavio pored vedrice. Nekada se tome nasmejao, ali sad nije više smjevao. Kad se vratiš kući, ući ćeš cela u vedricu da se okupaš kao riba. Vetar je te noće oduvao i poslednji oblačić. Neba je bilo ugasitoplavo, a na sred neba blistalo je sunce i obasjavalo zelene planinske obronke. Hajdi se veselo krenula sa Petrom u planinu. Cvetovi su otvarali svoje male plave i žute čašice i gledali u sunce smešeći se. Hajdi je trčala tamo-amo i klicala od radosti, jer su svuda bili bokori nežne žute jagorčevine. Nabrala, biće cveća i sutra. Tako je pošla sa Petrom dalje, a i koze su išle mirnije, jer su već izdaleka namirisale jedro bilje s visokog pašnjaka. Desi Ali's voice understood each other and one after another rushed to the green meadow. Some were still nibbling on grass, others were running around, while the third was gesticulating with their horns to stop time. Come and jump among goats, because it was the right enjoyment for her to watch them jumping and having fun, so she herself started jumping from one to another and getting to know each of them personally, as each one was different and behaved differently. At that time, Peter brought his backpack, took out four loaves of bread that were in it, and nicely arranged them in a square shape on the ground. He placed more loaves on Hajdi's side and fewer on his own, because he knew exactly how he got them. Then he called Hajdi, but she had to be called many times before responding, as she was so busy jumping and playing with her new friends that nothing else was noticeable. Suddenly Peter shouted loudly, and the echo resounded all the way to the stones, and Hajdi only appeared then. When she saw how their snack looked, it pleased her so much that she started clapping her hands with excitement. "Enough jumping, time to eat," said Peter. "Sit down and eat!" Hajdi sat down. "Is there milk for me?" she asked, looking at the jug in the middle. "Yes," replied Peter. "And you have two loaves of bread, and when you drink the milk, you'll get another treat from Belka. After that, I'll also drink milk." "What will you drink it with?" Hajdi wanted to know. "From my goat, Šarula. Do you want to eat again?" Peter reminded her again. Hajdi drank first, and when she put down the empty jug, Peter got up and brought her another one. Hajdi cut a piece from her bread, and everything that was left and still larger than Peter's goat's food, which was almost ready with the thyme, she offered him with the entire plate of cheese and said: "Take this, I'm full." Peter looked at Hajdi in amazement, because he never would have thought to say or give something like that in his life. He hesitated for a moment, simply not believing that Hajdi was serious, but she continued to offer him bread and cheese, and as he didn't take it, she put it on his knees. Only then did he realize that she meant it seriously. He grabbed the gift, nodded his head in gratitude, and feasted like never before in his life since watching goats. SE - ADD SPELLING ERRORS Roman o devojčici Hajdi je stari više od jednog veka, ali još uvek privlači pažnju čitalaca širom sveta. Hajdi je jedna od najčitanijih knjiga na svetu. Hajdi je prvi roman za decu u kome je glavni lik devojčica. Po romanu Hajdi napravljeno je oko dvadeset igranih i crtanih filmova i TV serija. Roman je obiman tekst koji govori o devojčici imenjenoj Hajdi. Ona ima svoje osobine koje se mogu lako upamtiti, kao što su njen otvorenih očiju ili njen način da se ponaša na putu od dedine kolibe do pašnjaka. Književni tekst o Hajdi je obilan i složeni sa velikim brojem događaja i likova. Proza u romanu je način izražavanja koji je blizak našemu svakodnevnom govoru, a opisivanje je način prikazivanja sveta koji nas okružuje. Roman o Hajdi se sastoji od nekoliko tema koje govore o devojčici i njenom životu. Ona je interesantan tekst koji privlači pažnju čitalaca širom sveta, posebno mladima koji vole da čitaju o avanturama i prijateljstvu.